Objectives:

- 1) To study the role of NSS in rural area.
- 2) To study some strategies for adopting village by NSS

Introduction:

India is mainly a land of villages as 80 percent of the country's population resides in more than 558000 villages. Hence, any effort made to attain country's development need to spotlight its interest on this 80 percent rural people. During the last 65 years Government through planned effort have been trying to apply its programmers' for rural development with almost might and vigor. However, despite all these attempts on the part of government and also notable increase that has been achieved in industrial and agricultural produce, the economic dissimilarity is increasing in India.

include such as construction roads, drinking water wells and construction of Panchayat building, establishment of co-operative societies, women's production activities etc. These projects and activities should benefit the total community.

Fourth step:

Attention during the fourth stage will be focused on utilizing the infrastructure and the facilities created for development of individuals, the families, the interest groups & the community & in all aspects of their life. Here special attention must be providing to weaker sections of the community. The project could be undertaken with help of banks, Government agencies .people should helped to tap these resource. These projects as mentioned earlier should results into some physical outcome in the form on increased income, more irrigation facilities, better health and nutrition etc.

Methodology:

Lecture-cum-Discussion and field visit

Conclusion:

Government programmes and schemes must work, these should not replaces.therefore NSS should help community people to take advantages of various programmes and schemes of government agencies.Lastly NSS programmes should help people to achieve some physical outcome such as more new land brought under cultivation, more irrigation facilities, more production, more income, better helth and nutrition etc. NSS inculcate the social values among youth, to develop themselves a sense of social responsibility and to identify the needs and problems of society and involve them in problem solving by the way of adopting village.
