I AND ME

'I' and 'Me' are not the one but the two;
I am a daughter, a sister, a wife and a mother,
But every human frisks with me as a doll.
I crave for love right from my genesis,
But I get only the revulsion not only from him but ...
not knowing the demeanor of each,
I have equal impulsion for each.
Still unaware of the fact that brother has special attention,
I wonder for the profanity smeared on me.
Then I grow up and ask for my wishes
They impose their choices, my father, mother and Every one of them.
When I get to know the discreteness
With which I am brought up, I blame Him for my her-ness
That led rest of my life harnessed.

I try to look for the empathy but in vain...
Then I decide to love myself and Find out the one in me
I realize, Oh! There is someone who is different from 'I' and that is 'me'.
It's too late to realize that for the happiness,
I should not seek for anybody, neither he nor she but only
I, Me and Myself.
Surrounded by many categorizers I am trapped in dilemma
And eventually I learnt to live with both 'I' and 'Me'.
